Shooting of M. D. Foley.

The Reno papers while containing the particulars of the shooting and death of Mr. Foley, do not give any reason for the deed. Mrs. Alice M. Hartley, who fired the fatal shots, followed her victim down the stairs and upon the arrival of the Sheriff gave herself up as his prisoner and handed him the pistol. She appeared very calm and only said: "I have shot Mr. Foley and hope he will die." Parties on the second floor of the building left their offices on hearing the shots, and saw Mr. Foley coming down the stairs from the third floor. He passed into the offices of Drs. Phillips, closed the door and said to Dr. W. L. Phillips: "Doctor, I am shot and am a dead man."

He staggered into the private office and laid down on the couch. The doctors administered stimulents and immediately made an examination and found a pistol-shot wound one and one-half inches to the left and the same distance below the navel. He gave evidence of great internal hemorrhage and it was apparent that unless it was stopped he would soon die. Dr. Bergstein arrived and the three doctors operated by opening the abdomen and found the small intestines had been pierced, which they proceeded to repair. The hemorrhage was so great however, that he soon died from its effects.

To several that inquired of Mr. Foley before he became unconscious whether they could do anything for him, he replied, "Nothing."

He remained conscious for about ten minutes after the shooting, then passed into an unconscious state, dying in thirty-five minutes after he was shot. He made no statement nor did he refer to the shooting after the first remark to the physicians that he was a dead man.

Mrs. Foley was summoned and arrived a few moments before her husband died.

There is a mystery about the whole affair, neither party having made a statement, and the various street rumors have no foundation save that somebody also said so and so.

Mrs. Hartley told the janitor of the Bank of Nevada, Mr. G. O. Wright, that she wanted to see Mr. Foley at 4 o'clock. She told him early yesterday morning and he left word in the bank later in the day. Mr. Foley went to the depot while the 4:15 train was standing there and shortly afterwards returned to the Bank, going immediately to Mrs. Hartley's studio in the Bank building. The interview must necessarily have been very brief, for the time seemed but a moment to those who had seen him on the street when they heard that he was fatally shot.

According to last evening's Chronicle Mrs. Hartley yesterday told an acquaintance that the reason she had killed M. D. Foley was that in a few months she expects to become a mother, and Foley, who was a married man, was charged with the paternity of her unborn child.

THE STRIKE DYING OUT.

The Oakland A. R. U. Declare the Strike off.

Oakland, July 27.—At a meeting of the local lodge, A. R. U., last night, the Union decided by a vote of 187 to 146 to declare the S. P. strike off. The meeting was decidedly stormy and much bitterness was shown. In fact an agreement was not reached until a strong following had threatened to leave the Union. Many of the men will be taken back by the railroad company.

Woodland, Cal., July 27.—This morning was devoted to the examination of two witnesses in the preliminary examination of the A. R. U. men charged with train wrecking and murder. The first witness was Joe Wallace, who met the boy, Johnny Sherbourne, near the trestle shortly after the wreck. Samuel Knight was the next witness. Knight detailed the substance of a conversation held with strikers previous to the wreck. Counsel for defendant asked witness if the soldiers had been ordered through the U. S. Marshal to shoot people down in protecting Southern Pacific property. Witness refused to answer the question, declaring that communications between officers of the Government were not subject to overhauling in a random examination. The Court sustained the witness.

Regular Mails.

Mrs. Harvey Cox, who lives on Crooked Finger creek, in Marion county, Or., in her husband's absence, the other day, thought she would learn how to use a gun. When she pulled the trigger one charge of bird-shot went through the thigh of her little five-year-old girl, Elma, setting the child's clothes on fire. With proper care the little one will live.

Cleveland in Egypt.

On Friday night some parties who evidently have little respect for the "fellow" occupying the Presidential chair, stuffed an effigy and suspended it from a tree in the Capitol grounds. It was discovered yesterday morning and found to bear the following legends on various portions of the figure:

"The King is dead! Long live the King! God save the Queen!"

"Buzzard's Bay."

A miniature dagger, with blood trickling down the blade, was sticking in the region of the heart. On the dagger was the inscription: "Carnot's end." and on the other side was "Cleveland's Deserts."

Pinned to the figure was a representation of a crown with the words: "No Crown of Thorns for the King."

On the rear of the effigy was the inscription:

"Drunk Again."

"Coat made in England, dear boy, don't yer know!"

On that part of the anatomy that occupies the chair were these words: "Seat of Learning."

Probable War.

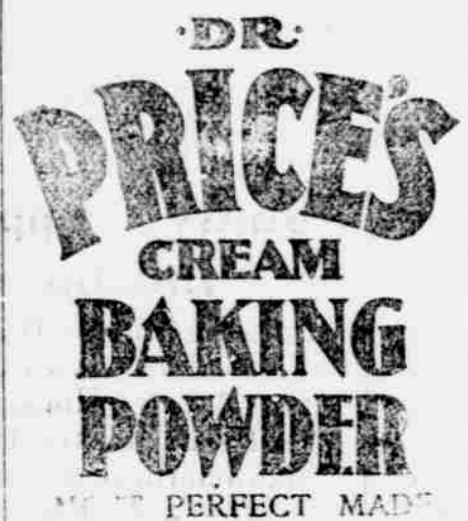

Tien Tsin, China, July 27.—While no formal declaration of war according to the usual diplomatic forms has been made, both the Chinese and Japanese governments recognize that an actual state of war exists and more collisions are expected hourly. Negotiations are still in progress but there is only a vague chance that amicable arrangements may be arrived at.
